

The vision of this hospital is “to become a regional center of excellence by actively listening to and partnering to meet the individual healthcare needs of those (they) serve.”

A hospital with a mission to increase collaboration and communication designed a room that would encourage physicians to discuss solutions to problems and patient needs. They needed a standing height table that would bring doctors together and support quiet collaboration.

Vanerum Stelter Studio worked through nine iterations with the designer and end user. As the landscape of the collaboration zone took shape, the furniture adapted to meet aesthetic and budgetary needs as well. The end result was a counter height, two inch thick exposed edge amoeba shape worksurface.
